Gwinnett Daily Post

Gwinnett County, Georgia

You Are Here: » Editorials » Article

NEWS
Front Page
Local/State
Obituaries
Nation/World
Business News
Editorials
Sports
Life & Leisure
Weekend/Movies
Gwinnett Gab
Health/Wellness
Home & Garden
Taste & Travel

Family & Spirit

Search...

Archives

Corrections

GO

SERVICES
Classifieds
Legal Ads
Photo Galleries
Subscriber Services
Reader Submission
Forms
Career Fair
Special Sections

Contact Us

Advertising Dept.
Circulation Dept.
Editorial Dept.
About Us

Links
Community Links
Local Traffic
Information
Lottery
Stocks
TV Listings
Weather

Politicians not afraid to exploit race

11/18/2006

By Dick Yarbrough

Congratulations to Atlanta Mayor Shirley Franklin, U.S. Rep. John Lewis and former U.N. Ambassador Andy Young.

Just when I thought political advertising couldn't get any sleazier and the truth any looser, they proved me wrong. In an environment where standards are lower than low, they set a new record.

Lee Morris, a former member of the Atlanta City Council, was running for chairman of the Fulton County Commission on the Republican ticket, to replace Karen Handel, who was elected secretary of state. Handel is also Republican.

Morris is by all accounts very moderate in his politics. He was endorsed by the liberal-leaning Atlanta Journal-Constitution, and by Creative Loafing, an alternative newspaper in the city that makes the AJC look positively conservative.

Several mayors throughout the county supported Morris, along with current and former members of the Atlanta City Council black and white, male and female. Morris opponent was Dr. John Eaves, a former regional director of the Peace Corps, a Morehouse graduate and a seemingly qualified candidate as well, who was seeking political office for the first time.

Eaves received endorsements from former Gov. Roy Barnes, the Atlanta Labor Council, members of the Fulton County Commission and Sherry Franks, former executive director of the America Jewish Committee's Atlanta chapter. In short, it seemed that two good people were running for office, a rare event these days. One might have hoped that Morris and Eaves could have run on their records and their platforms. In this case, one would have been wrong.

This is Atlanta, and in Atlanta, it is always about race. Always. You see, Morris is white and Eaves is black.

As the campaign neared the end, Lewis, Young and Franklin felt compelled to support Eaves with a blatantly racist ad that went over the top and hit rock bottom. Lewis said, If you think fighting off dogs and water hoses in the 60s was bad, imagine if we sit idly by and let the right-wing Republicans take control of the Fulton County Commission.

Lee Morris? A right-wing Republican? Is Lewis saying that Morris would make Fulton County the Birmingham of the 60s? How about Sonny Perdue? He s a Republican. Does John Lewis think the governor is about to unleash the dogs and water cannons?

Young said if Eaves wasn t elected it would turn back the clock on equal rights and human rights and economic opportunity for all of us.

What a crock. Even for Young. Franklin said she participated in the race-baiting because she was infuriated by partisan and divisive politics, failing to see the irony in her own partisan and divisive comments.

I m really not surprised at Lewis and Young.

An icon in the civil rights struggle, John Lewis lost track of the real world years ago. He can t exist if whites and blacks get along, as most of us do these days. Lewis must manufacture racial tension. It is the oxygen that keeps him breathing.

Young, another major force in the civil rights movement and a personal hero of mine, shoots from the hip faster than the Lone Ranger. Just ask Wal-Mart.

The real disappointment is Shirley Franklin. I worked closely with her during our days at the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games. I was responsible for federal and state government matters. Shirley handled city and county politics.

We got along famously, and I was delighted when she replaced Bill Campbell as mayor of Atlanta. Not anymore. Campbell could make a racial issue out of a pecan tree, and Franklin is sounding more like Campbell every day.

Eaves won the election. But there are no winners here. Lewis, Young and Franklin showed us that racism is alive and well. For short-term political gain they were willing to resort to the basest racial pandering and insult the intelligence of thoughtful black and white Americans in the process.

I thought we had moved beyond this kind of stuff in Georgia. I thought wrong. The only thing that has changed is the players. And they won t hesitate to play the race card. They ought to be ashamed of themselves.

E-mail columnist Dick Yarbrough at yarb2400@bellsouth.net.

Have any thoughts about this column? Share them with us at letters@gwinnettdailypost.com. Letters should be no more than 200 words and are subject to approval by the publisher. Letters may be edited for style and space requirements. Please sign your name and provide an address and a daytime telephone number. Address letters for publication to: Letters to the Editor, Gwinnett Daily Post, P.O. Box 603, Lawrenceville, GA 30046-0603. The fax number is 770-339-8081.

1 of 2 11/27/2006 11:50 AM

	⊠ Email This Article 昌 Printer Friendly
Another year, another toy In new hit film, the joke's on us O.J.'s sickening book should be ignored Stewart was devoted to community Now comes the tricky part Conservatives need to look in mirror Letters to the Editor GOP Georgia the salmon of American politics Veterans need proper care  >>>

©2001-2007 Triple Crown Media, Inc. All rights reserved. Privacy Policy

2 of 2 11/27/2006 11:50 AM